OTHB6351 and NTGK6351 are additions to the new MA (Biblical Archeology) curriculum. As such, we have only two semesters of data for these courses. These courses also tend to be smaller courses, so the sample size for this data is limited.

			extent have you grown spiritually and in your love for God and neighbor through your program? How?" We believe that this phrasing of the question better fits our MA (Biblical Archeology) curriculum and what we are trying to accomplish through this degree.

 The Discipleship and Spiritual Formation Course represents a change to the curriculum, so we have limited data for this course. This class has only been part of the curriculum for two semesters.

Executive Summary

The Biblical Studies faculty voted to approve a new curriculum for the MA (Biblical Archeology) on January 19, 2022. The new curriculum was subsequently approved by the faculty and the trustees for implementation in August of 2022. We just finished the first year of classes with the new curriculum.

Due to the curriculum change, the Biblical Studies faculty approved a new assessment grid on August 5, 2022. While this change represented a significant shift from our last assessment, we feel that the current assessment measures represent substantive improvements. Many of the former courses that we used for assessment are no longer a part of the degree (or are now listed as admissions requirements for the degree). But we believe the addition of the summative assignment as a part of the assessment represents a marked step forward in our ability to assess this degree.

We did not have any MA (Biblical Archeology) graduates during this assessment period, so we have very limited data from which to work, since we had no students complete the Summative Assignment during this timeframe. We anticipate at least four graduates in the next two years, so we anticipate much better data for our next assessment.
